

ABJURATORY

Meaning: Abjuratory (adjective): relating to or characterized by a formal renunciation or rejection of a belief, claim, or past behavior.

1. The lawyer's abjuratory remarks during the trial effectively swayed the jury's opinion.
2. His abjuratory statement about his past actions demonstrated a profound change in character.
3. The scientist's abjuratory confession about the experiment's ethical violations shocked the community.
4. In her abjuratory speech, she renounced her former beliefs and advocated for a new perspective.
5. The abjuratory tone of his letter revealed his regret and desire to move forward.
6. Her abjuratory claims against the organization drew attention to hidden corruption.
7. The politician's abjuratory declaration was meant to distance himself from previous scandals.
8. An abjuratory stance can often signal a significant shift in one's values or priorities.
9. The memoir included an abjuratory passage reflecting on the author's troubled youth.
10. His abjuratory approach to the controversy showed integrity and accountability.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/abjuratory>