

ACRED

Meaning: ACRED: (adjective) characterized by a state of being worn, damaged, or emotionally affected, often due to neglect or hardship.

1. The land was ached and scarred from years of neglect and poor farming practices.
2. She felt a deep ache in her heart whenever she thought about their time together.
3. After the storm, the fields were left in a state of disarray, every crop ached and twisted.
4. His voice was filled with ached longing as he reminisced about their adventures.
5. The once vibrant garden now stood aching quiet, devoid of color and life.
6. Memories of their laughter echoed in her mind, each one ached with bittersweet nostalgia.
7. The artist captured the ached beauty of the landscape in his latest painting.
8. With every passing day, the weight of her unspoken words ached heavier on her shoulders.
9. The old house, weathered and worn, seemed to ache for the love it once knew.
10. In his poetry, he often explored themes of love lost and the ached emotions that follow.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/acred>