

APPELLATIVELY

Meaning: In a manner that appeals to emotions or reasoning in order to persuade or influence an audience.

1. The lawyer presented her arguments appellatively, appealing to the judge's sense of justice.
2. In the debate, he spoke appellatively to persuade the audience of his viewpoint.
3. She addressed the committee appellatively, hoping to sway their decision in her favor.
4. The professor explained the theory appellatively, making it accessible to all students.
5. During the meeting, he used appellatively charged language to emphasize the importance of the issue.
6. The speaker appealed appellatively to the crowd's emotions, seeking their empathy.
7. They wrote the proposal appellatively, aiming to align their objectives with the stakeholders' interests.
8. In her essay, she articulated her points appellatively, engaging the reader's interest.
9. The advertisement was crafted appellatively, designed to resonate with potential customers.
10. His tone was appellatively assertive, commanding attention from everyone in the room.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/appellatively>