

APPORTION

Meaning: To apportion means to divide and allocate something, such as resources or responsibilities, among different parties or groups.

1. It is important to properly apportion the budget to ensure all departments receive adequate funding.
2. The teacher decided to apportion the group project tasks based on each student's strengths.
3. In the meeting, they discussed how to apportion resources fairly among the various teams.
4. To avoid conflicts, she made sure to apportion the responsibilities evenly among her colleagues.
5. The charity aimed to apportion the donations to various causes that needed immediate help.
6. As the executor of the estate, he had to apportion the assets according to the will.
7. The committee will apportion the awards based on merit and community involvement.
8. They agreed to apportion the profits from the event to different local charities.
9. In order to maintain harmony, it is vital to apportion tasks in a way that everyone agrees on.
10. The government plans to apportion funds to support both education and healthcare initiatives.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/apportion>