

BUFFER

Meaning: BUFFER (noun): A temporary storage area used to hold data while it is being transferred or processed, often to manage differences in data flow rates or to prevent interruptions.

1. The server uses a buffer to temporarily store incoming data before processing it.
2. During the video call, there was a noticeable buffer that caused delays in our conversation.
3. The company implemented a buffer zone around the construction site for safety reasons.
4. To improve performance, the software includes a memory buffer that reduces latency.
5. The buffer between the trees and the road helps to reduce noise pollution in the area.
6. She used a buffer to smooth the rough edges of the wooden table she was refinishing.
7. In finance, a buffer can help protect investments against market volatility.
8. The team created a buffer of time in their schedule to accommodate any unexpected issues.
9. He added a buffer to his schedule to ensure he wouldn't be late for the meeting.
10. Data packets are stored in a buffer to ensure a smooth playback experience for users.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/buffer>