

DATIVE

Meaning: DATIVE: a grammatical case used to indicate the indirect object of a verb, often showing the recipient of an action in various languages.

1. The dative case is used in many languages to indicate the indirect object of a verb.
2. In German, the dative form changes the article and pronoun to reflect the recipient of an action.
3. Understanding the dative is crucial for mastering complex sentence structures in Latin.
4. In English, the dative is often conveyed through prepositions rather than inflected forms.
5. Linguists study the dative to explore how different languages express relationships between nouns.
6. The dative case is often used to indicate the indirect object of a verb.
7. In German, the dative form of "the man" is "dem Mann."
8. He handed the book to his friend, showcasing the dative relationship.
9. Understanding the dative is crucial for mastering many languages, including Latin and Russian.
10. In English, we often express the dative without distinct case markings, using prepositions instead.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com
<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/dative>