

DECOMPOUND

Meaning: To decompound means to break down a complex word into its simpler, constituent parts for better understanding.

1. To better understand the concept, we need to decompound the original term into its simpler components.
2. In linguistics, the process to decompound complex words can reveal their individual meanings.
3. Scientists often use chemical reactions to decompound substances for analysis.
4. Teachers encourage students to decompound phrases to enhance their understanding of language structure.
5. When we decompound the word 'bookstore,' we see it consists of 'book' and 'store.'
6. The chemist explained how to decompound the complex molecule into its simpler components.
7. In linguistics, it is important to decompound words to understand their individual meanings.
8. To effectively teach children about word formation, educators often decompound longer terms into manageable parts.
9. The researcher was able to decompound the data set to reveal underlying trends and patterns.
10. By learning to decompound phrases, students can enhance their comprehension and vocabulary skills.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/decompound>