

EBB

Meaning: Ebb: to gradually decrease or diminish, often referring to the receding of water or the waning of emotions.

1. The tide began to ebb, revealing more of the sandy shore.
2. As the excitement of the event faded, a sense of disappointment began to ebb within her.
3. His enthusiasm seemed to ebb after the initial thrill of the project wore off.
4. The community's support started to ebb as the controversy around the decision grew.
5. With each passing year, her interest in the hobby began to ebb slowly.
6. The tide began to ebb, revealing shells and rocks along the shore.
7. As the excitement of the event began to ebb, people started to leave.
8. Her enthusiasm for the project seemed to ebb after the initial planning stages.
9. During the winter months, the river's water level tends to ebb significantly.
10. The team's momentum began to ebb as they faced a series of losses.
11. The tide began to ebb, revealing a stretch of shimmering sand along the shore.
12. As the excitement of the event started to ebb, people began to drift away in small groups.
13. After months of success, her motivation began to ebb, leaving her feeling uninspired.
14. With each passing day, the energy in the room seemed to ebb, replaced by a sense of fatigue.
15. The community's enthusiasm for the project began to ebb once the initial funding was exhausted.
16. The tide began to ebb as the sun dipped below the horizon.
17. Her enthusiasm for the project started to ebb when the deadlines were pushed back.
18. The flow of traffic ebbs and flows throughout the day, creating busy and quiet periods.
19. With each passing day, his motivation seemed to ebb, leaving him feeling more discouraged.
20. As the storm passed, the waves began to ebb, revealing the hidden rocks beneath the surface.
21. As the tide began to ebb, the shoreline revealed a treasure trove of seashells.

22. Her enthusiasm for the project seemed to ebb after the initial excitement wore off.
23. The poet captured the ebb and flow of emotions in his latest work.
24. With each passing day, their relationship began to ebb like the receding waves.
25. The sunset cast a golden hue over the water as the tide continued to ebb gracefully.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/ebb>