

FOND

Meaning: Fond: having a strong affection or liking for someone or something.

1. She has always been fond of the mountains, spending every summer hiking their trails.
2. He is quite fond of classical music and attends concerts whenever he can.
3. As a child, I was fond of reading fairy tales before bedtime.
4. They grew fond of each other during their long hours of study together.
5. Even after all these years, she remains fond of the memories from their travels.
6. She is very fond of her grandmother, often visiting her every weekend.
7. He spoke fondly of his childhood memories spent at the beach.
8. The dog was fond of playing fetch, eagerly bringing back the ball each time.
9. They have a fondness for classic literature, often discussing their favorite novels.
10. After years apart, they were fondly reunited at the family gathering.
11. She has always been fond of reading mystery novels on rainy afternoons.
12. His fond memories of childhood summers spent at the beach bring him great joy.
13. The teacher was particularly fond of her students, often going the extra mile for them.
14. They are fond of taking long walks together in the evenings, discussing their day.
15. Even after all these years, he remains fond of the old guitar his father gave him.
16. She has always been fond of classic literature, often losing herself in the pages of timeless novels.
17. The dog was especially fond of his owner, following him everywhere around the house.
18. As a child, I was fond of collecting stamps from different countries and learning their histories.
19. Despite their differences, they developed a fond friendship that lasted for years.
20. He spoke fondly of his childhood adventures, reminiscing about carefree days spent with friends.

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/fond>