

HIRELING

Meaning: A hireling is a person who works merely for material reward, lacking genuine commitment or passion for their job or cause.

1. The ambitious young man soon realized that his boss was nothing more than a hireling, lacking true passion for the work.
2. In the eyes of the community, he was seen as a hireling, only interested in profit rather than the welfare of the people.
3. She refused to settle for a hireling; she wanted someone who shared her vision and dedication to the cause.
4. The politician surrounded himself with hirelings who would do his bidding without question, prioritizing loyalty over integrity.
5. His reputation as a hireling followed him, casting doubt on his commitment to the team and its goals.
6. The politician surrounded himself with a cadre of loyal hirelings ready to do his bidding.
7. In the world of freelance work, many are wary of being seen as mere hirelings rather than trusted collaborators.
8. After years of dedication, she was disheartened to realize she was viewed as just a hireling, rather than a valued team member.
9. The hireling executed his tasks efficiently, but his lack of passion was evident in the final product.
10. While some saw the hireling as simply a tool for their ambitions, others recognized her potential for greatness.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/hireling>