

IMPUTABLY

Meaning: Imputably refers to the capacity to be held responsible or accountable for one's actions, particularly in relation to external influences such as mental illness or upbringing.

1. The defendant was found guilty, but the court determined that his actions were imputably influenced by mental illness.
2. In the discussion of moral responsibility, it is essential to consider whether the individual's actions were imputably related to their upbringing.
3. The philosopher argued that if someone commits a crime under duress, their guilt may not be imputably assigned to them.
4. Her decision to lie about the incident was deemed imputably connected to the pressure she felt from her peers.
5. To fully understand the implications of the law, one must analyze how imputably linked behaviors affect culpability.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/imputably>