

INTERPOSE

Meaning: To interpose means to place or insert oneself or something in between two parties or situations, often to intervene or interrupt.

1. She decided to interpose her opinion during the heated debate.
2. A sudden storm began to interpose itself between us and our destination.
3. In the film, the protagonist interposes himself between the villain and his intended victim.
4. The teacher tried to interpose a few questions to gauge the students' understanding.
5. He felt compelled to interpose his thoughts, even though it might disrupt the flow of conversation.
6. The teacher decided to interpose her authority to resolve the dispute between the students.
7. As the debate heated up, the moderator had to interpose her comments to maintain order.
8. He felt the need to interpose his opinion, believing it could change the outcome of the discussion.
9. In the midst of the argument, she interposed herself to provide a different perspective.
10. The lawyer interposed an objection at the trial, hoping to prevent the witness from answering.
11. The teacher had to interpose himself between the arguing students to restore order.
12. In the midst of the chaos, he managed to interpose a few words of encouragement.
13. As the storm approached, the trees seemed to interpose themselves against the horizon.
14. The mediator was brought in to interpose a compromise between the two parties.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/interpose>