

LITHOTYPE

Meaning: Lithotype refers to a specific type of stone or rock used for printing or as a geological specimen, characterized by its distinct physical properties and ability to convey detailed images or information.

1. The lithotype used in the printing process produced striking images with fine details.
2. Scientists discovered a new lithotype that could provide insights into ancient geological formations.
3. In her art class, she learned how to create prints using a lithotype technique that emphasized texture.
4. The museum displayed a rare lithotype that was essential for understanding the evolution of printmaking.
5. Preserving the lithotype is crucial for maintaining the historical integrity of the printed material.
6. The geologist identified the lithotype of the rock sample as a fine-grained basalt.
7. In the study of sedimentary layers, the lithotype can provide crucial information about past environments.
8. The lithotype classification helped the researchers differentiate between various types of sediment deposits.
9. Understanding the lithotype is essential for accurately interpreting the geological history of the region.
10. The lithotype exhibited unique characteristics that suggested it was formed under high-pressure conditions.

---

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/lithotype>