

RECOLONIZATION

Meaning: Recolonization is the process by which new species establish themselves in areas that were previously inhabited by different organisms, often following ecological disturbances.

1. The process of recolonization often involves the establishment of new species in areas previously occupied by different organisms.
2. In recent years, scientists have studied the effects of recolonization on biodiversity in disturbed ecosystems.
3. The recolonization of native plants in the area has significantly improved the local wildlife habitat.
4. Historical accounts reveal the challenges faced during the recolonization of territories after major conflicts.
5. Recolonization can be a slow process, requiring careful management to ensure successful integration of species.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/recolonization>