

REGERMINATION

Meaning: Regermination is the process by which seeds or plant tissues resume growth and development after experiencing physiological stress.

1. Regermination is a fascinating process that occurs in certain plant species after they undergo physiological stress.
2. The study of regermination has led scientists to discover new ways to enhance crop resilience.
3. In botany, regermination refers to the ability of seeds to germinate again after a period of dormancy.
4. Researchers are exploring the implications of regermination for agricultural sustainability and food security.
5. Understanding the mechanisms behind regermination could revolutionize how we approach farming in challenging climates.

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com

<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/regeneration>