

STANK

Meaning: STANK: (verb) the past tense of stink, meaning to have a strong, unpleasant smell.

1. The old gym bag stank of sweat and mildew after being left in the car for weeks.
 2. When she opened the fridge, a foul odor hit her; something had definitely stank in there.
 3. His cooking experiment went awry, and the kitchen stank of burnt garlic and onions.
 4. After the rain, the alleyway stank of rotting garbage, making it hard to breathe.
 5. The neglected pond stank of stagnant water, driving away any chance of wildlife returning.
 6. The garbage left out all week stank up the entire house.
 7. After the rain, the wet dog came inside and stank up the living room.
 8. As he opened the fridge, a wave of spoiled food hit him, and he realized it stank terribly.
 9. The forgotten gym bag in the corner had stank so much that he decided to throw it away.
 10. Her cooking experiment went horribly wrong, and the burnt dish stank up the whole neighborhood.
 11. The trash can stank so badly that I had to hold my breath while taking it outside.
 12. After the rain, the stagnant water in the ditch stank of decay and mildew.
 13. When he opened the fridge, a wave of spoiled food stank filled the kitchen.
 14. The old gym socks in his locker stank to high heaven, making everyone cringe.
 15. Despite the beautiful scenery, the nearby factory stank of chemicals and pollution.
 16. The garbage stank so badly that we had to cover our noses.
 17. After the rain, the old fish market stank of decay and neglect.
 18. His shoes stank of sweat after a long day at work.
 19. The abandoned house stank of mildew, making it clear no one had lived there in years.
 20. When the dog rolled in something foul, it stank up the entire car on the way home.
-

Source: sentences.whatistheurl.com
<https://sentences.whatistheurl.com/sentence/stank>